

In today's multifaceted and shifting IT infrastructures, leading edge organizations find it challenging to ensure that their technology delivers value. Many organizations have neither the IT resources nor the time necessary to properly implement and integrate new technologies into their existing environment. As a result, the true value of these technologies is often not realized, or realized only with great difficulty, forcing organizations to utilize outside firms to provide services in these areas.

The WebHouse Resident Services provides organizations with specific skill sets needed for projects that are tailored to specific environments. WebHouse Residents provide expertise to implement new technologies in order to speed the time to value, as well as provide operational and architecture skills to ensure constant evaluations and updates around best practices.

Residents are much more than just staff augmentation: while staff augmentation is about supplying a person to fill an operational role (where the organization is responsible for their growth, ongoing skills and success), a WebHouse Resident is a renowned Subject Matter Expert (SME) within a specific type of technology or environment. WebHouse is responsible for ensuring that the Resident is continually trained, has the latest skills to ensure that they are knowledgeable, and provides value for the specific environment in which they reside.

WebHouse Residents are evaluated and selected to ensure that they will provide technical and operational value specific to your organization, so they will become an integral part of your team.

Please contact WebHouse today at info@webhse.com to inquire about how our Resident Services can provide subject matter expertise needed to architect, implement, and support IT environments and technology to help speed time to value.
